What the Arts do for me? They set my spirit free.

During the month of October 2012, the Central Illinois arts community is planning a series of arts-related activities that will coincide with National Arts and Humanities Month and the grand opening of the new Peoria Riverfront Museum.

As a part of their marketing efforts, ArtsPartners of Central Illinois, Inc., is encouraging local artists to send photos expressing their own art form along with a short statement that describes what the arts do for them. (ex: dancer leaping - "The Arts give my heart wings.") The statement can be insightful, poetic, inspirational or humorous.

Because I experience great freedom when I paint, my chosen statement is, "The Arts set my spirit free."

Birthday order coming right up!

When my youngest sister Celeste put in a request for some of my pink and blue notecards for her birthday last month, my response? Order coming right up!

Art chosen for Museum exhibit

The CIAO (Central Illinois Artists Organization) and Friends Invitational Exhibition will be one of the first exhibits inside the new Peoria Riverfront Museum when it opens later this fall. The exhibition highlights the abundance of local art talent in our area.

Of the over 200 local artists who submitted works, 75 were selected for display. The exhibit will run through March 3, 2013, and will be free to the public the First Fridays of November through March. I'm pleased to report that my painting on the right, "Faith in the Light," was chosen for the exhibit.
